What is INFECTIOUS BURSAL DISEASE ?

Infectious bursal disease (Gumboro) is an important viral disease which cause significant losses to the poultry industry worldwide. This virus destroys the immature B-lymphocytes of the bursa of Fabricius, resulting in a severe and prolonged immunosuppression. Clinically it affects young chickens, usually up to 6 weeks of age. It is an infectious and highly contagious disease. The infected birds have inflamed vents and vent pecking and trembling is observed. There is ruffling of the feathers and flock has unkempt appearance. The morbidity can be 100% and mortality can be up to 60%. The only way to protect your flock is through vaccination. What vaccine should you choose?
